WHEAT WITH WHISKERS ON IT, SAID THE LAD.

A few days ago one of Greencastle's women, whose husband owns a farm, secured the services of one of Greencastle's young Americans to go to the farm with her and pick some cherries. On their way home they passed a field of wheat. The boy noted that the wheat was not like other wheat he had seen and asked: "Mrs., what is that on the wheat?" "That," said the farmer's wife "is bearded wheat." They drove on down the road when suddenly the lad exclaimed, "Oh, look. There's another field of wheat with whiskers on it."

REV. GUY CARPENTER ACCEPTS NEW CHARGE

Called to Pastorate of M. E. Church of Kingman, Ind., and Will Assume New Duties at Once—Succeeds B. F. Clifton.

Rev. Guy Carpenter, of this city, has accepted the pastorate of the M. E. church at Kingman, Ind., and will assume the duties of his new charge at once. Rev. Carpenter is a graduate of DePauw University, and also of the Boston Theological School and has held several charges in this state.

Rev. Carpenter was called by the Kingman church to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. B. F. Clifton, who was arrested last week on the charge of stealing two automobile light tanks found in his possession. The charges came just as Rev. Clifton was arranging for his wedding, which was scheduled for Wednesday of this week. Clifton claimed that he bought the two prestolite tanks for two strangers, but on account of the undesirable notoriety brought on him, he decided to resign his charge. Rev. Clifton had been in the ministry for two years, having attended Wabash and DePauw universities.—Brazil News.

FILES PETITION FOR RE-HEARING

CITY ATTORNEY F. M. LYON IN INDIANAPOLIS MONDAY TO SEE MEMBERS OF PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION REGARDING GREENCASTLE SUIT.

THE CASE IS FILED TODAY

F. M. Lyon, city attorney, this morning filed with the Indiana Public Service Commission, a petition for a re-hearing of the case of the City of Greencastle against the Greencastle Water Works company, in the water rate controversy.

Mr. Lyons was in Indianapolis Monday to consult members of the commission regarding the case. Following his consultation in Indianapolis Monday, he, this morning, mailed to Indianapolis the petition of the city asking a re-hearing in the case.

The Greencastle Water Works water rate case was one of the first taken up by the commission. The case was tried several months ago and a water rate was fixed. The rates here, according to the city officials, are much too high, and it was decided that a re-hearing should be asked. It is believed that the petition of the city will be granted by the commission and that the matter will again come up for consideration. So far the commission has not signified when it will take up the question, but it is probable that the matter will not be taken up until early this fall. The general belief here is that if the commission grants the re-hearing that the water rates here will be materially reduced.

ENGAGE BAND FOR SUMMER MONTHS

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOOSTER CLUB AND MANAGEMENT OF LOCAL MUSICAL ORGANIZATION MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR A SERIES OF PUBLIC ENTERTAINMENTS HERE DURING MONTHS OF JULY, AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER—CONCERT EVERY TWO WEEKS.

CONCERT THURSDAY NIGHT

Arrangements have been made by the executive committee of the booster club and the management of the Greencastle band for a series of band concerts to be given on the public square this summer. Six concerts constitutes the series. The musical entertainments will be given every two weeks during the months of July, August, and September.

The band management, as an appreciation of the financial assistance recently rendered the musical organization, has offered its services to the booster club next Thursday evening free of charge. A concert will be given at the southeast corner of the square that evening.

According to the agreement made Monday evening by members of the executive committee of the booster club and the management of the band, the concerts will be given the second and fourth Thursday evenings in the months of July, August and September. The band will receive $30 for each concert, making the total cost of the series $180.

The dates for the concerts including the free entertainment are as follows:

Thursday, July 24.
Thursday, July 8.
Thursday, July 22.
Thursday, August 12.
Thursday, August 26.
Thursday, September 9.
Thursday, September 23.

The management of the band expects to spring a big surprise at this week's concert Thursday evening. A fine program has been arranged and new music will be used that evening.

The band has a fine assortment of music and a new program will be given. Monday evening's rehearsal was very successful and the members of the band were enthusiastic in their work and were greatly pleased when an announcement of the concert series was made. Barton W. Shipley, a saxophone player and vaudeville artist, will play with the band while here this summer. He is here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Shipley. The reed section of the band has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Mr. Shipley to the organization.

The band, accompanied by members of the booster club in automobiles, will go to the Union Chapel church north of the city next week and give a concert at an ice cream social to be given at that place. It is probable that twenty-five machines will accompany the musicians.

CANADIAN CROPS.

Canada, hard hit by the war, is now rejoicing in an unexpectedly bright outlook. The cause is the same as the chief contributor to a prosperous revival in this country—the wheat crop. Last year the Dominion had hard luck; 1,000,000 acres, one-ninth of the total wheat acreage, were destroyed by blight. This season there is an increase of 1,700,000 in the sown area, and everywhere, according to the latest reports, the crop is flourishing as never before. Even if the average yield is no greater than that of 1913, there will be a production of 275,000,000 bushels, 50,000,000 more than the previous record; but the experts expect more than that.

In spite of recent drops in wheat prices, it is likely that the whole crop will sell at a figure far above the average. To a country so conspicuously agricultural as Canada, it is needless to say that his is the best possible basis for immediate business recovery. Moreover the rapid growth of the war munitions industry seems a special guarantee against unemployment in the cities. It is interesting that Canada and the United States, so much alike in other respects should be so similar just now in their economic situation. Providence seems to be favoring both nations, and assigning them as their chief task the feeding of a world that is too busy fighting to feed itself.

DO POSTCARDS PROVE ANYTHING?

It seems that in the use of the quick and handy postcard Germany leads all nations. In fact she uses twice as many as her nearest rival, who, strange to say, is Japan. Third comes the United States.

Does it prove any advantage in efficiency or in culture, or in modern business methods to save the time and money required for stamp and envelope? Or is it merely that the processes for turning out the little pasteboards in numbers have reached a higher degree of cheapness and perfection in those three countries?

Or are Germans, Japanese and Americans siller than other citizens about sending home souvenirs of a day's journey to supposedly envious friends?

Or—well, do the postcard statistics prove anything at all, and if so, is it serious or frivolous or perfectly neuter?

MEN'S RIGHTS.

Chicago disciplining a policeman for wearing a wrist watch, appears to be trying hard to keep its reputation clear from any taint of effemininity. Of course, aviators, explorers and mountain-climbers wear them without disgrace, and they were in high favor in the armies until the difficulties of getting out some of the damaged weapons interred in the wrists of the combatants began to prove bothersome to the surgeons.

The handy and useful wrist-watch for men, like the comfortable, cleanly and good-looking "shirtwaist" for summer wear is having a hard time proving its right to existence.

Why it should be so hard for common sense to assert itself against prejudice and tradition is strange. But it must be some comfort to women who have had to fight for every smallest step against such uncomfortable odds to see the men having a little trouble with shirtwaists and wrist watches.

THE NATION LOVES WILSON.

"In the eyes of his own partisans President Wilson has always been regarded as a high-class man, a thinker, a constructionist, a patriot and a safe man to have at the helm of state. Those who differ from him politically have conceded his ability, his desire to be of service to the country, and have credited him with being a very sincere man. The country at large could find no fault in him and admired him as a type of citizen which no other country except ours can produce. But it was not until he was confronted with the great problems of state, that called for almost a superman to meet and solve, that everybody, democrats, republicans, progressives, men of all parties, discovered the real worth of the president to the nation. During the past few months, and particularly during the past few weeks, President Wilson has grown to gigantic proportion in the estimation and esteem of his fellow countrymen. Relatively, too, he has won their confidence, and whereas some doubted his ability to rise to big occasions he has demonstrated to the satisfaction of all that he is a safe man in a trying hour and that he can be firm when the demand for firmness arises. President Wilson has won a place in the hearts of the people which no president has occupied since Abraham Lincoln. They love him, they believe in him and they are not afraid to trust him, feeling and knowing that his greatest concern is for the rights and the welfare of the people over those destinies he has been called upon to preside. A less impetuous man would have plunged the nation into war; a less courageous man would have humiliated and shamed us. By combining a good sense with courage, patience with patriotism, appeal to humanity with diplomacy, he has averted a threatened calamity in the midst of our prosperity and with it all has made the nation and the flag more respected than they have ever been before. If things turn out agreeable to the demands of the United States, as now seems more than likely, President Wilson must be given credit for having forcefully demonstrated to the world that "the pen is mightier than the sword." And in doing that, he has hastened the day when world peace so long the dream of those who abhor the waste and beastly purposes of war, will be a reality and men of all nations and all tongues will dwell together as brothers of the common good."—White County Democrat.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 21.

When Governor Ralston and his official associates, with the members of the general assembly of 1913 decided to take up the task which had been dodged for years by their predecessors, that of providing adequately for the support of the educational institutions of Indiana, two of the things accomplished was the removal of these schools from the necessity of perpetual legislative lobbying and placing the agricultural experiment station at Purdue on a much stronger basis and able better to take care of the important work of that department.

The agricultural station and the agricultural extension work are important to all the people of the state. They help the farmer to better crops, and better methods in the handling of all farm work, whether stock raising or the production of any of the many profitable crops. So taxpayers recognize that the money spent in this way is well invested and add to the wealth of the whole state. Farmers are more and more each year learning the value of submitting their problems to this department and studying carefully the experiments and results which the individuals apply in a practical way and to general betterment and profit.

Since 1911 the state has added practically $100,000 a year to the development and work of the agricultural experiment station and agricultural extension as shown in the tables accompanying. The expenditure of the funds appropriated for Purdue in the years from 1911 to 1914 were used as follows:

	General	Agricultural
	Instruction.	Station.
1911	$374,680.65	$217,683.66
1912	$367,690.26	$236,934.30
1913	$507,948.05	$263,395.60
1914	$558,818.62	$306,832.03

In such extraordinary happenings as the stamping out of the foot and mouth disease in 1914, while the Purdue department gave most valuable assistance the money necessary was drawn from the emergency fund held in trust by the Governor and the regular fund was not disturbed. In that particular instance the governor provided $100,000 from this emergency fund, which was further augmented by the allowance from the federal government.

ASK HOOSIERS TO ASSIST IN RELIEF FOR BELGIUM.

To the people of Indiana:—

The Indiana Committee, in charge of the work of furnishing aid to the impoverished Belgian population, makes a special and urgent plea to the people of Indiana at this time.

The appeals to America for aid to the Belgian people have been frequent and urgent, and probably will continue to be so for an indefinite period. The responses by the American people to these appeals have been without precedent in the history of philanthropic and charitable effort and it is not to be supposed that the benevolent spirit which prompted the unstinted giving will be limited by time or moderated by pressing demands, however meritorious, from other sources.

The civil population of Belgium today is without occupation or source of income. A vast and thriving commercial and industrial population has been practically annihilated. There are neither imports into the country nor exports from it. Its factories are either ruined or idle and its agricultural elements are employed solely in the business of producing supplies for two contending armies. Probably five millions of people, men, women and little children are dependent upon the generosity of this great neutral nation, not for food alone, but to a very large extent for wearing apparel.

The committee in charge of the Belgian relief work is making an earnest attempt to meet the emergency which exists in Belgium by organizing into a form of permanency irregular methods of charitable donations in order that the burden may be equitably distributed and fall in fair proportion upon all classes of society.

The undersigned, having served for five years as Minister to Belgium, cheerfully bears witness to the worthiness, thrift, and high character of the Belgian people. Their present situation is due to no fault of their own, but to the contentions of rival ambitions in which they are in no way concerned.

It is hoped, therefore, that this appeal will meet with a ready response from all classes of Americans, whatever their racial origin may be. This committee feels that Indiana should do its share toward this wonderful philanthropy. Other states have sent state ships laden with food—some of them two and three vessels—to the aid of these unfortunate people. Indiana has yet to send its first ship. Organization is now being perfected throughout the state to cargo an "Indiana Ship" to sail from New York early in September and we solicit your assistance with food or money to help us provide the cargo.

We ask for food—preferably wheat, whole wheat flour, peas, beans, corn meal and oats or rolled oats, as these give the maximum nourishment for the least money. Money donated for the "Indiana Ship" will be spent in Indiana for food to cargo this vessel. Transport of food donations to designated assembling stations will, if so desired, be paid by the commission. Oversea transportation is at the expense of the commission.

Those who prefer to contribute money for the "Indiana Ship" should send checks or currency to S. A. Fletcher, Treasurer, in care of this office. If preferred, money contributions may be paid to treasurers of local committees. All donations of money and food will be acknowledged promptly. All information regarding shipments of foodstuffs from points donated will be furnished by this office.

Hoping that you will in some way assist in providing the cargo for the Indiana Ship," we remain, Yours hopefully,
Henry Lane Wilson, Chairman,
Indiana Committee, Commission for Relief in Belgium.

THE HERALD FOR 10C. A WEEK

OBITUARY.

Levi Sears was born December 16, 1862, and fell asleep in Jesus at 6 o'clock Saturday evening, June 12, 1915, at the age of 62 years, 5 months and 26 days.

He was united in marriage to Elzina C. Harris Nov. 6, 1875. To this union was born seven children, three of whom have gone on before him. He united with the Christian church in 1875 and died in belief of that church.

Deceased had been in poor health for some time but did not complain and kept on at his work until about four weeks ago he was forced to give up his labor. He was confined to his bed but four weeks and during this time he bore his suffering with great patience.

He was an ideal husband, father, brother and neighbor; always ready to lend a helping hand in time of need; never knowing when he had done enough for his family. He is survived by a wife, one daughter, Edith; three sons, Albert, Clarence and Lee; four granddaughters, one brother, Ambros, of Missouri Valley, Ia., who had been by his bedside for the past two weeks.

All was done that loving hands could do, but all in vain, for Jesus had whispered come to me and rest from thy labor and toil.

We saw you suffer, we heard you sigh,

With throbbing heart and tear dimmed eye.
But now all pain and sufferings past
You have gained your rest at last.

Then sleep on dear father, take thy rest,
God called you home, He thought it best.

We miss thee, O! how we miss thee!
We miss you from your place,
We miss thy kind and loving face.

A shadow o'er our life is cast
Which is there forever to last.

We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care.
Our home is sad without thee;
We miss thee everywhere.

Not now but in the coming years and in a better land
We'll read the meaning of our tears
And then we'll understand.

EFFICIENT AND WISE EXECUTIVE

Governor Ralston's Record One of Achievement.

GAVE STATE USEFUL LAWS

Man of Broad Sympathy and Democratic Manner, Learned in Law, Has Exerted His Influence to Beneficial and Constructive Legislation.

As one sits in the large reception room of the Governor's office at Indianapolis and sees the heterogeneous crowd waiting "to see the Governor" he appreciates anew, or possibly for the first time in his life, the democracy of our form of government. One knows that he is there to get an interview from the Governor, for whatever he has to say is of interest to the public, but what can all the others want with him? Here is an old woman with a shawl of ancient pattern about her shoulders. She asks if she can see Governor Ralston, for her son is in prison and is needed at home. She is told by the secretary—and they all, rich or poor, look alike to Secretary Johnson—that the Governor is now engaged, but that she can see him presently. Here are a half dozen working men who believe they have not been given a square deal by their employer and they want to present their case to the Governor, for they know he is eminently a fair man and that if he believes they have been wronged, will do what he can for them. The important little fellow over by the window is a local politician and he wants to "see the Governor" about a job—and the man next to him is a member of the legislature and has a pet bill he wants the Governor to advocate—and the next one to him is the representative of a big corporation who thinks his company is suffering from restrictive legislation; and so they come from all walks of life and on all sorts of missions. And the Governor will see them all and listen attentively to what they have to say.

It may be well said here that the Governor was particularly fortunate in securing for his secretary a man of mature judgment. Mr. Johnson has had years of experience as a newspaper man and is held in the highest esteem by all his fellow scribes. At the time he was called to the secretaryship, he was engaged in business and has an intimate knowledge of the business affairs of the state. He is always alert in guarding the interests of the administration with which he is so closely associated.

At last you are told by Secretary Johnson that it is your turn to "see the Governor," and as you receive his cordial greeting you wonder "What manner of man is this?" (That men and women of all classes look to him for counsel.) Tall and broad and sincere, he stands squarely upon both feet, courageous, and ever alert to any situation, and impresses you that he is every inch a Governor.

Shortly after his inauguration as Governor, one of his little friends was told that Mr. Ralston is Governor now—that he had just been made Governor—and she quickly responded, "No, he wasn't, he was born a Governor." And so he impresses one that he is by nature a Governor of men—a man who "can talk with crowds and keep his virtue, or walk with kings nor lose the common touch."

And it is because of this broad sympathy and democratic manner of his that folk from all stations of life feel free to confer with him. There is no frigid formality to be gone through in order to gain an audience with him, and the ease with which he receives callers is often commented upon.

Governor Ralston's strength of body and mind and his ever readiness for instant action have given him a wonderful mastery over the details of his office and made him a most excellent judge of state and economic problems. In his inaugural address, January 13, 1913, he said:

"Unless the law is enforced, constitutional guarantees become but the dreams of our fathers and the most sacred rights of citizenship have nothing secure upon which to rest. Before the law the rich and the poor, the capitalist and the laborer must stand upon an equality. As Governor, I shall have no favorites in the execution of the law, and let it now be understood that I shall hold that the mind which devises a scheme that is in violation of law is guiltier than the dependent hands that execute the offense in obedience to orders."

Next year Indiana will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of her admission into the Union, and she is proud that she has called Samuel M. Ralston for her Centennial Governor.

No other Governor of Indiana during her one hundred years of statehood—with the single exception of her great War Governor, Morton—has been so continually confronted with situations that would appall a man of less courage and strength as has her Centennial Governor.

With a hostile press of opposing political faith in the state capital, ever ready to misconstrue his every act and to pervert the truth, Governor Ralston has never lost his head nor permitted himself to be drawn into its quagmire. Kipling had such a man in mind when he wrote:

"If you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
"If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you and make allowance for their doubting, too,
"If you can wait and not be tired by waiting or being lied about don't deal in lies,
"Or, being hated don't give way to hating and yet don't look too good nor talk too wise."

And so this man does not lose his head when being lied about—nor does he become impatient when a newspaper maliciously seeks to place him and his acts in a false and unfavorable light. In the main, the papers of the state without regard to party faith, have given his administration loyal support. But what of his administration and what has been accomplished in it?

At the time of his inauguration the legislature was in session and one of the bills before that body was a public utilities bill. When that measure was in the senate it was the subject of many conferences and much delay was had in bringing it to a vote. It has been subsequently disclosed that it was the plan of those opposed to the bill to delay action upon it until too late to secure the passage of a desirable utility measure. One of the means by which those opposed to the measure sought to throttle its passage was a secret caucus. The Governor learned of this and gave out a public statement in which he said:

"I wish the Democratic senators who stand for the right sort of legislation on this subject would favor calling off the caucus on the Shively-Spencer bill, so that the proposed amendments to it might be fought out in the open on the floor of the senate. The people are entitled to know where the Democratic party stands on this measure and if this bill is to be amended before its passage, so that it will be worthless as a law, or if it is to be killed, the people are entitled to know the influences that defeated the public will."

Needless to say, he carried his point and secured the passage of the best public utility law of any state in the Union. This law is ably administered and saves to the public many times its cost each year. It puts a conscience in the management of public service corporations, it prevents them from being looted by promoters and demands from them a fair service at a fair price.

Another masterpiece of constructive legislation is the Vocational Education Act passed in 1913. Prior to its enactment only those boys and girls who are able to go away to college were afforded an opportunity to receive training so as to equip themselves to do the things they most liked to do. Under this act the boy and girl are now able to receive at least elementary instruction in that art or craft to which they are most adapted. This act alone has saved to the school more boys and girls than any other in the history of the state—not even excluding the compulsory educational act. The boys and girls now go because they are permitted to do things they like to do and that will fit them for earning a living. The United States Commissioner of Education said in his report:

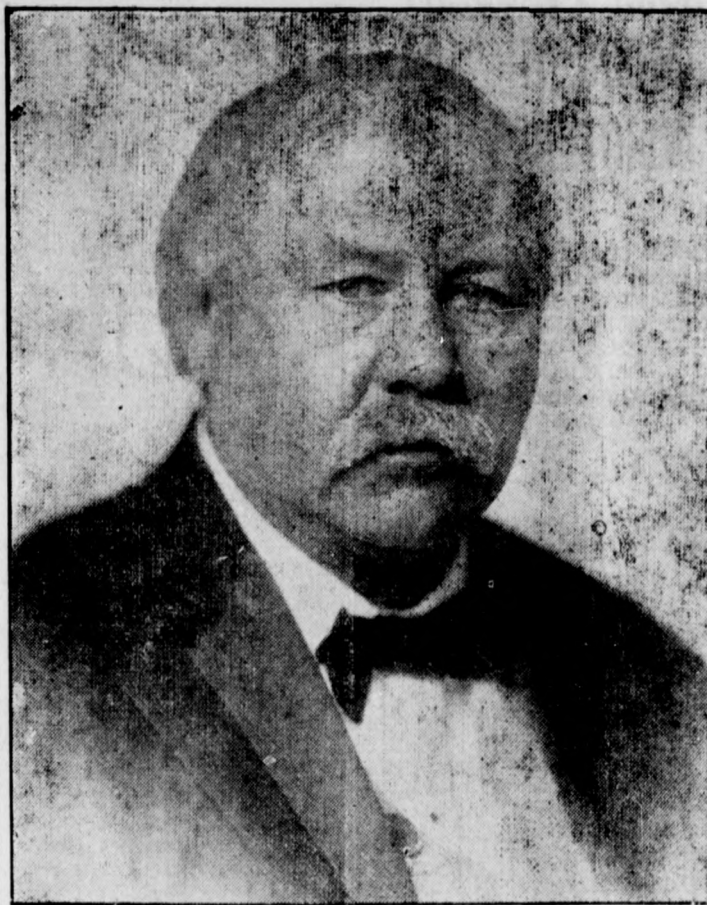

"In what is probably the most comprehensive statute yet enacted the Indiana legislature established a state system of vocational education giving state aid for training in industries, agriculture and domestic science through all day, part time and evening schools."

None can attack the justice of this law for it makes real the boasted educational advantages of the state to the great mass of boys and girls who work in the mills, factories, shops and on the farm and in the home. No other act since the establishment of our common school system has been so great an influence upon the social and economic life of the state. With these two acts alone to its credit the Democratic party might point with pride to the present administration for years to come.

But there are many more of equal merit. In fact, there has been more constructive legislation enacted in Indiana during the present administration than in any previous administration in the history of this state.

It is estimated by insurance men that two-thirds of the fire loss of the country is due to preventable causes. In order to save that two-thirds of the fire loss in Indiana the 1913 legislature enacted the Fire Marshal Act, which is administered without cost to the people of the state and saves to them thousands of dollars annually in reduced insurance premiums and fire losses prevented.

In order to more equally distribute the burdens of taxation, an inheritance tax law was enacted. Under this law the rich estates which do not bear their full share of taxation must now more nearly do so. This law will bring to the state treasury approximately one-half million dollars annually.

Another subject of much needed legislation was a law to prevent loan sharks from preying upon the poor. The law enacted permits the loan agents to charge a rate of interest commensurate to the risk incurred, but it prevents them from charging such exorbitant rates as was formerly their custom.

In keeping with Democratic loyalty to our public school system, and supplemental to the uniform text book law passed by a previous Democratic legislature, the legislature of 1913 passed a uniform high school text book law. Prior to its passage different high schools used different text books and the books were frequently changed in the same school. The exactions so thrown upon the poorer students were severe. The uniformity of the books in all high schools of the state and at a greatly reduced cost in a boon to them.

Indiana, for a decade, had neglected to enact an up-to-date law applicable to commercial paper. She had grown to be one of the great commercial states of the Union, but it was not until the present administration that she took her place as the forty-fifth state to pass a uniform negotiable instrument law.

It is to the credit of the present administration that Indiana now stands in the front rank of all the states in the way of progressive legislation upon the correctional institutions of the state. In the passage of the penal farm law the jail system—always unsatisfactory and never economic—has been, in a measure, supplanted by a correctional institution, the state penal farm, which has been the dream of social workers. The good resulting from that law can be measured only by the measure of good citizenship resulting therefrom. The entire nation will follow Indiana's lead in this movement.

The 1913 legislature also took cognizance of the right of every child to be born and reared in a proper environment and to that end passed the housing law, requiring all landlords to furnish to their tenants sanitary quarters wherein may be had the privacy of a home.

So many good laws were passed by that legislature that The Indianapolis News on March 11, 1913, said editorially:

"We owe to the legislature an excellent public utilities law, a penal farm law, an inheritance tax law, a loan shark law, a blue sky law, an anti-cockade law, a vocational educational law, a housing law, and a fire marshal law. That is a record of positive achievements and the Democratic party is entitled to much credit for it."

The only legislature of the state rivaling the one of 1913 is the 1915 legislature. At that session were passed some laws of vital interest to the public.

The first important measure to be passed by the 1915 legislature was the anti-lobby bill. The members of the legislature realized that they are but the agents of the people and that lawmaking is public business and that the public has the right to know the motives of those advocating or opposing a measure. Under this law lobbyists are required to be registered with the secretary of state, stating the name of their employer, the character of their employment and they are restricted in their operations.

It is a well-known fact that immediately after the passage of that act that there was an exodus of the lobbyists from the state capital and that the legislature was freer from traction company to adjust their differences, but all attempts at a settlement had failed.

On the night of November 5, 1913, the Governor, believing that the time had come for him to act, called out the entire National Guard of the state, with orders to assemble "in the city of Indianapolis at the earliest possible hour, armed and equipped for duty in time of riot and tumult." By morning it had become noised around that the guard had been called and the indignation of some of the labor leaders was intense. A meeting was called of the strikers and their sympathizers on the state house lawn at noon, November 6th, to protest against the action of the Governor in calling out the guard.

A crowd estimated as high as eight thousand assembled on the lawn at the south door of the state house and was addressed by labor leaders for an hour and then a cry was started for the Governor.

When informed that the crowd desired to hear him, Governor Ralston immediately responded over the protest of his friends who feared for his personal safety. When he appeared upon the steps of the building an ominous silence settled upon the crowd—a silence that might break into fury against established law and order or that might act as a pacifier of the passions of men. The situation was most intense. The Governor spoke without preparation and was most effective. His speech broke the backbone of the strike. He said in part:

"I would have different conditions here if it were possible for me to do so. I have not brought about present conditions, as you know, but I shall endeavor to avoid a repetition of them. If my life is spared, I shall take a stand at the next session of the legislature for an arbitration law that will arbitrate. The orderly course of society must not be interfered with by industrial controversies."

"But I am now confronted with conditions requiring immediate action. On the 13th day of last January, and it may prove an unfortunate day to me, I took a solemn oath to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and that oath I propose to respect. You would not have me do otherwise. Within the last five days I have seen lives sacrificed and property destroyed in our streets and it is not for me to debate who is at fault. I know that life and property are not secure and that I must do what I can to make them secure everywhere in our state. The sacrifice of lives and property must cease and whatever course is taken will be to that end, and I appeal to you to uphold me—to uphold me in the enforcement of the law and the preservation of order."

With order again established Governor Ralston again undertook to bring about an adjustment of the differences between the men and the traction company and within forty-eight hours the cars were again running and a permanent working agreement perfected.

The arbitration law will greatly reduce the chances of the recurrence of a similar situation.

Soon after the adjournment of the 1913 legislature, Indiana suffered the greatest flood in its history. Hundreds of its people were rendered homeless by the waters, and property was damaged to the extent of millions of dollars. Governor Ralston, personally, assumed charge of the work of relief and for days he did not sleep; for an entire week his sleep amounted to but a few hours. A telephone was placed at his bedside and he was in constant communication with those in active charge of the work of relief in the flooded districts. One of less physical strength must have failed. While the flooded area in some of our neighboring states was not as large as in Indiana, yet in one neighboring state more than $500,000 was spent in combating the waters and in the relief of the distressed, while Indiana's Governor spent less than $15,000 of the state's money, a greater portion of which was for the pay and sustenance of the National Guard detailed to relief and patrol duty. A large amount of money was raised by voluntary contributions by the citizens of the state, for the relief of flood sufferers. The whole of this amount was not expended for the relief of flood sufferers and nearly $60,000 is deposited at interest, to the credit of the Governor.

The legislature of 1915 realized the need of legislation looking to the prevention of another flood and accordingly it enacted laws that will enable the different municipalities to effectually protect themselves against another such catastrophe.

For years there has been a demand for a reduction in the costs of our state legislature. These demands were not heeded until 1915, when the legislature resolved to conduct its business in the most economical manner possible. To that end it adopted rules that enabled it to save on legislative printing and supplies alone, approximately $15,000, when compared with the cost of such printing and supplies in the last Republican legislature.

By a manipulation of the classification of work to be done, the Republic-can legislature virtually gave into the hands of one firm the entire contract for the printing and supplies for the state. Upon the recommendation of Governor Ralston, a re-classification was made by the legislature so as to enable the printer having a small establishment to bid upon the printing and supplies for the state. This simple change in the classification for the printing will save to the state upon its printing contract, thousands of dollars annually.

The last two legislatures passed more acts for the protection of the workingman and the betterment of his working and living conditions than any previous two legislatures in the history of the state. To enumerate each of them and to comment thereon would extend this article beyond the limits assigned it.

The drug habit has been a curse upon civilization for the ages. It was for Indiana, by a Democratic legislature, to lead out in the prohibition of the sale of habit-forming drugs. This act supplemented by the federal anti-narcotic act, passed by a Democratic congress, stamps out the "dope" evil and restores to a healthy manhood and womanhood thousands of citizens of the state.

Legislation has also been had during the last two years looking to the conservation of our natural resources and to the development of our live stock industry. Those legislatures, however, did not turn their attention to live stock and to the neglect of human beings. They passed laws providing for the prevention of tuberculosis; for industrial aid of the blind; for the regulation of hospitals and tenement houses; to secure a supply of pure water; to establish playgrounds for children and to secure better sanitary conditions generally for the public.

The social evil has attained to such proportions as to require the serious thought of all patriotic citizens. The subject has been discussed by theorists and economists, but it remained for a Democratic farmer—a member of the house of representatives of 1915—with the support of the Governor to secure the enactment of a law that effectually stamps out that evil and forever abolishes the red light district.

The Governor of a great state must of necessity look to the needs of the several administrative departments for assistance in the administration of the affairs of state. Each Democratic state official, by the suffrage of the people, has measured up to the standard and well and capably discharged the duties of his office in perfect harmony with every other department of the state. There has been no charge of graft or fraud—even by a Republican press.

In those offices filled by appointment, the Governor has exercised rare discretion in his selections. He has in every instance selected men of integrity, character and ability for the positions he has been called upon to fill.

Although his administration has more truly progressive legislation to its credit than any other previous administration, he has never been known as an extremist, nor has he advocated any cure-all legislation. In one of his pre-election speeches he said:

"Those who know me well, know I have great respect for the old landmarks of constitutional government and that it would be my ambition, if Governor, to keep the administrative policy of the state, in so far as I would have any influence, true to the faith of the fathers."

Those who have followed the affairs of his administration know how well he has fulfilled that promise.

Neither is he disposed to parade the achievements of his administration, so far as he has had a part therein, in review before the people for public applause, nor to appeal to the prejudices of the people. One of the founders of our national government truthfully said:

"That a dangerous ambition more often lurks behind the spacious mask of zeal for the rights of the people than under the forbidding appearance of zeal for the firmness of efficiency of government. History will teach us that the former has been found a more certain road to the introduction of despotism than the latter; and that of all the men who have overturned the liberties of republics, the greatest number have begun their career by paying an obsequious court to the people; commencing demagogues and ending tyrants."

There is no clap-trap or bluster about our Centennial Governor. He has pursued the even tenor of his way and his acts have met with the approval—with but very few exceptions—of the entire press of Indiana. The opposition with which he has met from the press has been due to political reasons and to the fact that he would not receive his orders from the editorial room of any newspaper. Issues of vast importance have confronted him, and he has decided each one of them in accordance with his best judgment. Each day he has met the responsibilities of his great office in a complacent manner, content that his reward shall be the sweet consciousness of duty well done.

COUNCIL TO BUY ROLLER TONIGHT

COMMITTEES APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE PRICE AND EFFICIENCY OF ROAD ROLLERS WITH SCARIFIER ATTACHMENTS, WILL MAKE A REPORT TO THE CITY COUNCIL THIS EVENING AND IN ALL PROBABILITY, THE COMMITTEE WILL BE INSTRUCTED TO MAKE THE PURCHASE OF THE OUTFIT.

CITY STREETS INSPECTED

In all probability the committee consisting of Councilmen Charles Hoffman, Frank Allen and Elmer E. Crawley will purchase a new road roller for use on the streets of this city this evening. The councilmen have investigated the cost and efficiency of several makes of rollers and will make a report to the city council at the regular meeting of that body this evening. Should their selection of a suitable outfit be approved by the other councilmen, it is likely that a contract will be closed with a road roller company this evening.

According to the committee, the Huber road roller with a scarifier attachment, is the most suitable outfit for use on Greencastle streets. The committee was in Hendricks county last week and inspected the work done by three different rollers and scarifiers. The Huber roller pulled the scarifier through the ground in a very satisfactory manner, and the road was put back in excellent condition after the road had been rolled by the big machine.

The Huber roller is a 10-ton outfit and is provided with a powerful engine and a steering apparatus propelled by steam. The roller will cost about $2,495. Several road roller company representatives are expected to be present at the council meeting this evening. A contract is expected to be drawn up with the Huber company.

The street committee, which also consists of Councilmen Huffman, Allen and Crawley, inspected the streets of the city, which have been torn up by the sewer contractors, Monday afternoon. The committee instructed the contractors as to the repair work, which will be required before the sewer system will be accepted by the council. The contract provides that the contractors repair the streets and put them back in the same condition as they were before torn up, and the council will not accept the sewer until the work is all completed.

It is probable that the council will set a date for the inspection of the sewer system at this evening's meeting. The council members and the city engineer will go over the entire system and ascertain its efficiency within the next week.

GREAT TRACTOR PLANT IS PLANNED BY FORD

DETROIT, Mich., June 21.—In an interview here today, Henry Ford declares that his proposed new steel plant which is to be the largest in the world, will turn out over 1,000,000 tractor engines for farm use during the first year. The tractor will sell at $200 or less and is to be of a convertible type suitable for every farm purpose.

The automobile magnate has purchased 2,000 acres of land on the River Rouge, southwest of the city limits and on this tract he will erect his gigantic new plant and an ideal city for his employees. The plant is to cover 600 acres. Work on the plans have already started.

The ore is to be brought down the river direct from the mines. This is made necessary, Ford said, by the waste of time and money now entailed by shipping ore through Detroit to the eastern blast furnaces and the material back again for manufacture into engines. It is this waste that he intends to obliterate, and perhaps, he says, the company may own the mines from which the ore comes.

DEEPER TROUBLE MAY BE IN STORE FOR REV. CLIFTON

THEFT OF TOM HARWOOD'S AUTO DURING JONES MEETINGS MAY BE LAID TO HIM—THE VEEDERSBURG MARSHAL WIRES HARWOOD TO COME WITH PAPERS—THEFT WAS A MYSTERY.

MACHINE LOCATED AT FLORA

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., June 21.—That the theft of Tom Harwood's automobile here during the Bob Jones meetings may be charged to Rev. B. F. Clifton, late pastor of Kingman and Salem Methodist churches, was the statement made this morning when Marshal Sherer of Veedersburg wired from Flora for Mr. Harwood to come at once with the papers necessary to effect the preacher's arrest. Clifton was arrested Thursday afternoon on a charge of stealing two preste-lite tanks at Veedersburg. He was arrested at the home of Olecie Hesler, his fiancée, near Hillsboro and brought to Crawfordsville, whence he was taken to Veedersburg and then to Covington and placed in jail. He was arraigned in circuit court at Covington Friday and was released on bond after pleading not guilty to the tank stealing charge. On Friday night he was in Crawfordsville where he announced that he had resigned from the ministry and his marriage to Miss Hesler, set for Wednesday, has been indefinitely postponed. He went to his parents' home near Flora Saturday.

Returned With Auto.

It seems that a suspicion of the theft of Harwood's auto by Clifton has been entertained by authorities for several days. On Sunday Mr. Harwood went to Kingman where he made an investigation. He is said to have learned that Clifton came to the tabernacle meetings here and returned to Kingman with a five passenger Ford auto on the morning after his car was taken. Mr. Harwood, said he learned at Kingman that Clifton made a trip to his brother's home near Flora and on returning from this trip had a one seated auto for which he was said to have traded the larger machine.

Marshal Sherer of Veedersburg, who was instrumental in Rev. Clifton's arrest last week, went to Flora Sunday night and had in his possession the numbers known to have been on the Harwood machine. He was to go to Clifton's brother's home and examine the auto which the ex-preacher is said to have traded to him. This morning the Veedersburg marshal wired Mr. Harwood these words, "Come at once with papers." He did not state in his message that the machine had been positively identified, but told the owner that the numbers on the engine of the car had been filed off and that the license was a 1914 number and not the number on Harwood's car when it was stolen.

Theft Was Mystery.

The Harwood theft formed a mystery for the police here during the revival. Police had been stationed near the tabernacle to care for traffic but on the night of the theft the Pike street officer had been detained in town and did not get to the tabernacle until just before the meeting started. He noticed an open space in the line of parked autos but thought nothing of it until Mr. Harwood missed his car at the close of the service. The entire police force spent the night in search of a trace of the car but could find none. During the ensuing few days an exhaustive search was made in this and adjoining counties but the authorities were unable to hear any report of or a trace of the auto.

Scent Further Clue.

The police are now of the belief that a clue to the theft of two auto tires from a machine near the tabernacle before the stealing of Harwood's auto, has been disclosed. They have learned, they say, that two tires were shipped to Veedersburg from this city during the time of the meetings and it is said Clifton received the tires at Veedersburg. The preacher is known to have attended the Bob Jones meetings.

Mr. Harwood stated before leaving for Flora that he was confident that the auto that had been found there was his car. Of course, Mr. Harwood might be mistaken, however.

Sensation Created.

When it became known here Sunday that Clifton was suspected of knowing something of the Harwood

auto added shock and surprise was felt by Clifton's friends in this city. His arrest Thursday on the petit larceny charge and the subsequent postponement of his marriage and announcement of his retirement from the ministry, created a mild sensation. Clifton was held in high regard by those who knew him when he attended Wabash College here and DePauw University, at Greencastle, a few years ago, and when he was pastor of the Methodist church at Youmansville. This same feeling of respect followed him to his charge at Kingman and Salem and he was regarded as a capable sincere minister of the gospel. Many of his friends refuse to believe him guilty of the thefts with which he has been charged and suspected. They feel sure he is the victim of circumstances which they admit are peculiar but expect him to clear himself of all the allegations at the proper time. Clifton and his brothers say he will be able to explain his automobile deals satisfactorily and that the stories told about these trades are greatly exaggerated.

The body of William Ryan, a former Greencastle resident, was brought here today from Muncie for burial in the Forest Hill cemetery. The funeral party arrived here on the 11:59 o'clock Big Four train and proceeded directly to the cemetery, where short funeral services, conducted by Rev. Father W. A. Maher of the St. Paul's Catholic church of this city, were held at the grave. Mr. Ryan's death occurred Sunday morning. He formerly lived in Greencastle and was employed at the old rolling mill in south Greencastle.

Mrs. Elsie Truesdel, of near Cloverdale, was granted a divorce from her husband, Fred Truesdel, who is now serving a term in the Jeffersonville Reformatory for child desertion, by Judge James P. Truesdel was taken into custody in Michigan several months ago and returned to Putnam county, where he was sentenced to the reformatory.

REBEKAHS ENTERTAINED BY CLOVERDALE LODGE

The manner in which the Greencastle Bee Hive lodge, No. 106, degree team conferred the degree of the order to a class of ten candidates at Cloverdale Monday evening made a very favorable impression with the Rebekahs of south Putnam county. The degree team was accompanied to Cloverdale by a large delegation of Greencastle lodge members and the local people were the guests of the Cloverdale lodge.

The Bee Hive Rebekah lodge team, although organized a few weeks ago, gave the work of the lodge in a most interesting and faultless manner. Much favorable comment was made in regard to its excellent performance. The ritualistic work was given to the class of candidates during the early part of the evening. Several members of both the Cloverdale and Greencastle lodges and members of the class initiated made talks after the initiation.

Almost 100 people were present for the social entertainment after the lodge meeting and initiation. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. The Greencastle people made the trip in motor trucks, automobiles and carriages.

The local people who attended the meeting were: Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Sweet, Mr. and Mrs. John Welch, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Farrow, Mr. and Mrs. Frampton Rockhill, Mr. and Mrs. Will Dittmore, Mr. and Mrs. J. L.
